bringing new insights new dimensions and new perspectives to the interplay between the two i shall neither accept the rules set by theology and psychology nor simply abrogate them theologian peter homans writes in his introduction my procedure is an attempt to press mere dialogue and comparative analysis to the point where something new emerges first criticizing theology s inadequate view of freud the author moves to a psychological examination of theology based on a more generous interpretation of the viennese physician s seminal ideas and theories concerned with the implication of secularization for contemporary protestant thought homans next examines the existentialist theory of niebuhr and tillich radical theology and he contributions of such cultural critics as norman o brown phillip rieff and david bakan and proceeding beyond these on his own the author persuasively argues the necessity for new paradigms of religious and psychological understanding more than a study in the psychology of religion the book is concerned with the psychology of theological constructs especially the doctrine of transcendence it is a challenging provocative and very necessary beginning of an intellectual quest for relevancy one that should become increasingly significant to ministers and analysts laymen and professionals friends and enemies in both camps above all the author intends the book to provide a stimulus for thought to persons concerned with the fate of theology in an age given over to predominately psychological thinking those who although they cannot but affirm the psychological still sense that genuine meanings still reside in the theological publisher modern readers and writers find it natural to contrast the agency of realistic fictional characters to the constrained range of action typical of literary personifications yet no commentator before the eighteenth century suggests that prosopopoeia signals a form of reduced agency andrew escobedo argues that premodern writers including spenser marlowe and milton understood personification as a literary expression of will an essentially energetic figure that depicted passion or concept transforming into action as the will emerged as an isolatable faculty in the christian middle ages it was seen not only as the instrument of human agency but also as perversely independent of other human capacities for example intellect and moral character renaissance accounts of the will conceived of volition both as the means to self creation and the faculty by which we lose control of ourselves after offering a brief history of the will that isolates the distinctive features of the faculty in medieval and renaissance thought escobedo makes his case through an examination of several personified figures in renaissance literature conscience in the tudor interludes despair in doctor faustus and book i of the faerie queen love in books iii and iv of the faerie queen and sin in paradise lost these examples demonstrate that literary personification did not amount to a dim reflection of realistic fictional character but rather that it provided a literary means to explore the numerous conundrums posed by the premodern notion of the human will this book will be of great interest to faculty and graduate students interested in medieval studies and renaissance literature
